Utilities:

Utilities should be ordered at least 2 weeks prior to move-in.

The utility company may tell you they do not have an inspection number on the property yet. This is not unusual on new construction as the inspection number is forwarded to the utility company after final inspection and approval of the house for new occupancy. Since new construction is often on a tight schedule, go ahead and give the utility company the information and ask them to schedule as soon as they receive the inspection number. Utilities can be very frustrating, but planning ahead will help. Utilities should be turned on a few days before you plan to occupy your home. This gives the builder time to check things out for you and gives you extra time in case of a delay.
